

Attention local elected officials:

The FCC is planning to take away your right to control wireless antennas in your community.

Under the guise of “eliminating barriers to wireless deployments,” the Federal Communications Commission (FCC) is proposing new rules that virtually eliminate any authority for local governments to control the deployment of wireless infrastructure in their communities.

You will not be able to object to the construction of wireless towers in residential neighborhoods, at schools, daycare centers, parks, historic districts or any other location where antennas would impact the quality of life for your constituents.

The FCC will only back down if local officials object to this blatant power grab.

Please visit www.25-276.org to learn how you can help preserve reasonable local authority over the deployment of wireless infrastructure.
